Ken Trott, Agriculture in the Delta

Delta patterns of serpentine waterways and farmlands are almost 50 percent higher than the state's average.

Agriculture is the dominant land use of the Delta, comprising three-quarters of the region's landscape. Because of the fertile peat soils and the moderating marine influence, Delta agriculture's per acre yields

Photograph courtesy of Aerial Archives / www.aerialarchives.com