A Place for Nature...

Did you know? Tilden Nature Area and the EEC were established to create the “most innovative, creative interpretive program ever devised, and [the most] innovative, creative interpretive center that would set new standards in programs and exhibits for the park field.” – William Penn Mott, former director of the National Park Service and former Regional Parks general manager.

HISTORY Huchiun Ohlone Indians once lived along the banks of lower Wildcat Creek. For centuries they found abundant food, including shellfish, game, and plants. Spanish explorers and Mexican rancheros eventually displaced the Native American communities, and for years the lands were used for ranching and dairying. By 1890, water lured new interests to the canyon. Water companies built wells, pipelines, diversion dams, and a water tunnel over the next several decades. But Sierra water ultimately proved a more dependable water source and local watershed lands were opened to development. East Bay residents organized to protect the open space as parkland, and in 1934, Alamedas County voters created the country’s first regional park district. From 1935 to 1941 a Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) camp called “Camp Wildcat Canyon” was established in today’s Tilden Nature Area. Workers built roads, shelters, and picnic sites. Some of their skilled stonework remains. After WWII, local schools used these symbols on trailside directional posts: trails vary in length and difficulty, and are designated by these symbols on trailside directional posts:

- Jewel Lake Trail – .90 miles, gentle loop.
- Pack Rat Trail – .86 miles, moderate.
- Wildcat Peak Trail – 1.5 miles, steep.
- Pine Tree Trail – .93 miles, moderate.
- Laurel Canyon Trail – 1.11 miles, moderately steep.
- Memory Trail – .51 miles, moderate.

Exhibits that tell the story of the Wildcat Creek Watershed, information on park activities and wildlife, and nature-related books and other items. A self-guiding trail booklet is available for loan or purchase. The EEC is open from 10am-4:30pm, Tuesday through Sunday.

TILDEN NATURE CENTER For the historic Tilden Nature Center is just adjacent to the EEC. The Red Barn was constructed in 1955 by Berkeley High School carpentry students, with materials donated by the Berkeley Kiwanis Club. Little Farm is home to a variety of farm animals including cows, sheep, goats, rabbits, chickens, and pigs. Several heritage breeds of livestock are preserved, including Milking Shorthorn Cattle. Visitors are welcome to bring lettuce or celery (but nothing else) to feed the animals. The Little Farm is open daily from 8:30am-3:30pm.

NATURALIST PROGRAMS Park naturalists offer a variety of interpretive programs for schools, organized groups, and the public. Programs provide exciting opportunities to learn about the area’s natural and cultural history. Program information can be found inside the EEC, online at www.ebparks.org, or in the District’s activity guide, Regional in Nature. To make school or group program reservations, please call the EEC at (510) 544-2233, or visit the District’s website.

TILDEN NATURE AREA TRAILS The Nature Area is still a land of wild places. Help keep it natural and beautiful for generations to come. Please leave all plant, wildlife, and geological features undisturbed. Be not litterer; if you carry it in, carry it out. To avoid poison oak, stay on the trails. Hikes range from the leisurely, self-guided Jewel Lake Nature Trail to a vigorous climb up to Wildcat Peak for panoramic Bay views. The trails vary in length and difficulty, and are designated by these symbols on trailside directional posts:

- Jewel Lake Trail – .90 miles, gentle loop.
- Pack Rat Trail – .96 miles, moderate.
- Wildcat Peak Trail – 1.5 miles, steep.
- Pine Tree Trail – .93 miles, moderate.
- Laurel Canyon Trail – 1.11 miles, moderately steep.
- Memory Trail – .51 miles, moderate.
