The Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta is a region where two of California's largest rivers meet. Composed of 57 leveed island tracts and 700 miles of sloughs and winding channels, the Delta is a unique blend of small town communities, busy ship ports, farmlands, industries, highways, historical sites, and marinas.

California Department of Water Resources