Come One Come All
A MESSAGE FROM GENERAL MANAGER ROBERT E. DOYLE

EBRPD’s mission is to preserve and protect open spaces and make parks accessible for all generations to enjoy. With the incredible diversity in how people use parks, coupled with the rich and growing cultural demographics found right here in the East Bay, we wondered “How could EBRPD play a greater role in connecting people across cultures through shared experiences in nature?” Enter the EBRPD Multicultural Wellness Walks.

On a recent Saturday morning, some 100 people gathered at Tilden Regional Park’s Jewel Lake and “threw their cares away.”

“What’s bothering you these days?” asked a park staffer, engaging the diverse communities EBRPD serves. “My credit cards!” said a middle-aged Latina mother. “My homework!” shouted a 7-year-old Korean boy.

The all-ages, multiethnic group then whooshed their hands in the direction of the lake, laughing and sighing with relief as their cares fell away.

This fun exercise was just one of many activities that took place during the Multicultural Wellness Walk, a regular outing organized by EBRPD to welcome and introduce people from all backgrounds to the parks.

While there are some language barriers and varied fitness levels, the walks are designed to transcend differences, with stops along the way to make bird calls, practice chi gong or dance Zumba and yes, laugh a lot via “laughter yoga” – all things that can be shared in a universal language. These interactions break down stereotypes and fears, helping build greater understanding and appreciation.

With the generous support of Kaiser Permanente and the Regional Parks Foundation, the Multicultural Wellness Walks are just one of many innovative ways that EBRPD builds bridges across diverse cultural, socio-economic and religious communities to create lasting connections between peoples and nature. However you choose to experience nature, we’re glad you do. See you on the trails.

Earth Team Students Refurbish Oyster Bay

Oyster Bay Regional Shoreline has dozens of newly planted coast live oaks, Torrey pines and other native trees thanks to the efforts of hard-working teenage volunteers on the Earth Team crew.

Earth Team, a Richmond nonprofit, organizes young people throughout the East Bay to participate in environmental stewardship projects, such as tree planting, weed removal, trash cleanup and other activities that improve the environment, and provide hands-on learning opportunities and important job experience.

At Oyster Bay, students from San Lorenzo, Oakland and Alameda have spent a dozen Saturdays since 2015 planting trees, removing invasive weeds and making other improvements at this popular shoreline park near Oakland International Airport.

“These are urban kids who are improving an urban park that provides recreational opportunities and wildlife habitat,” said Pamela Beitz, a Park District resource analyst who oversees the Earth Team squads at Oyster Bay. “I firmly believe that if we are going to heal our environment and our inner cities, we need to do both simultaneously. This is a great example of that.”

New San Francisco Bay Trail Segment Under Construction

Construction began this summer on a new section of the San Francisco Bay Trail between Pinole Shores and Bayfront Park in the City of Pinole. The new ½-mile segment will travel along hillside bluffs until it sweeps north via a new 1,100-foot grade-separated bridge to cross over Union Pacific Railroad tracks. The bridge will land in Bayfront Park and will be maintained and operated by the Park District.

Planning for the Bay Trail along the San Pablo Bay shoreline in Pinole, Hercules, and Contra Costa County has been ongoing for decades. Construction is estimated to be completed by June 2018.

HAPPY CAMPERS

For some avid campers, half the thrill comes from snoozing under the open night sky—no matter the discomfort and the dirt. For others, however, particularly those new to sleeping bags and s’mores by the fire, the comparative ease of “convenience camping” makes such pleasures accessible to more people.

Convenience campsites offer the option of a simple cabin (or in some cases, canvas structures known as yurts) as a stand-in for the typical tent. Unlike the more luxurious “glamping,” convenience camping keeps traditional elements such as cooking over an open fire, rustic bathing and restroom facilities, and eating out in nature, but makes the activity a little easier.

EBRPD visitors can try it for themselves thanks to the District’s new convenience camping pilot program at Del Valle Regional Park. “This is a way for people who don’t really want to sleep on the ground to have a camping experience,” says Jim O’Connor, assistant general manager of operations. “It’s about accessibility. How do we meet the various needs of people who want to use our park system?”

The pilot program offers five cabins containing wooden bunk beds, a heater, a fan and basic electricity. The sites are located on the main loop at Del Valle, below the entrance road to the main campground.

The goal is to make camping easier during nonpeak times such as spring or fall. These cabins provide more shelter and allow people opportunities to camp without the crowds of peak summer season. Reservations for the cabins can be made through the Park District’s website starting September. The cost is around $100 a night.

If the response to the cabins at Del Valle is positive, the Park District hopes to expand the idea to Anthony Chabot Regional Park near Hercules, among others. “I think people are going to like convenience camping, especially families with young kids,” says O’Connor. “We can be that place to get them started.”

A Holocaust Survivor’s Inventions Save Park History

Bela Vidor has been a volunteer with the Park District’s History Archives since 2014, contributing over 750 hours of service. Bill, as he is known to his fellow volunteers, is an inventor at heart. At the District archives, he created a number of processes that significantly improved the preservation of our historic photographs, maps and documents. In 2014, the District archives acquired a set of historic maps with significant mold damage and deteriorating paper. Too fragile to be scanned, these maps needed to be digitized differently. Bill invented a vacuum-operated table to keep the delicate maps flat while being photographed by a camera mounted on an adjustable-height bracket. He also invented a way to “photograph” historic 35mm slides at a higher quality than the original slides! The image quality and file sizes are a perfect match for archival preservation.

In April 2017, Bill was recognized by Assemblymember Rob Bonta for Holocaust Remembrance Week, with a ceremony at the California State Assembly in Sacramento. Bill was born in Hungary in October 1940, and spent his early childhood hiding from the Nazis in Budapest with his grandmother, while his parents were both in Hungarian labor camps.

After his parents’ release in 1945, the family, as refugees, traveled from displaced persons’ camps to detention camps until Israel declared independence and his family was shipped to Haifa. The volunteers at the District archives have been enthralled with Bill’s life stories shared during lunch breaks, and with his innovative thinking and contributions. Bill says, “I found a perfect group of people with similar interests of preserving the past.”
