Reinhardt Redwood Regional Park

Located just a few miles from downtown Oakland, it contains a stately redwood forest, the largest remaining natural grove of coast redwoods (Sequoia sempervirens) in the region. Miles of trails wind through peaceful third-generation redwood groves giving little evidence of the park’s logging past. In the mid-1800s an enormous old-growth redwood forest was leveled to supply building materials for the San Francisco Bay Area. Visitors can imagine the forest’s grandeur before aggressive logging at a heritage viewing deck in adjoining Roberts Regional Recreation Area. In 2019, the park was renamed in honor of Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, a rare golden eagle or an Alameda striped racer. The park is one of the most majestic parks in the East Bay. Historical Landmark No. 970

Interpretive panels and a historical landmark are located a short distance past the Redwood Gate park entrance off Redwood Road highlighting a unique strain of rainbow trout that seasonally migrates up Redwood Creek from Upper San Leandro Reservoir. A constructed fish ladder helps them migrate around obstacles.

Native trout use a constructed fish ladder to seasonally migrate up Redwood Creek.
